(2) In poetry "keeping quiet" the poet "pablo neruda" said that there can be life under apparent stillness. He invokes the earth as a living symbol to prove his point. The earth never total inactivity even seeming inactive. The poet neruda makes it quite clear that 'stillness' should not be confused with total inactivity or death. The poet has no truck with death. His stillness means halting of harmful and hostile human activities. He takes the example of ice and seeds. They seem dead but later on they becomes alive. When ice melts and turns into water it becomes alive. Like this seed becomes a plant and become alive.
